We want to assure you that, in unison with the principles of Rush University Medical Center and national recommendations, Midwest Orthopaedics at Rush (MOR) will continue to provide you with the highest quality orthopedic care while practicing the principles of social distancing and preventative measures to curtail the transmission of Covid-19.

Our priority is to protect the health and well-being of our community, staff and patients, while still providing care to those who need it most. Our goal over the next few weeks is to limit individual contact to only those clinical scenarios that require it until we can resume normal operations. We will assess these time frames daily and weekly as the situation evolves. We will continue to practice social distancing to protect those around us while continuing to provide complete care to those that would otherwise be compromised by any delay in that care.
